Organizational Systems and Research

1. To understand why information is organized the way it is, think about the organizational systems you use where you live: Do you live in chaos or are there some things you organize into collections? Why do you organize these things this way? What criteria or rules do you use to determine how to organize them? Describe the advantages and disadvantages of using this system.

2. Think about how you perform research right now. What is your current method of research (where do you start and how do you proceed)? How do you evaluate the information you find? What are your researching strengths? What do you need to work on?
